

THE KNIGHTHOOD WAS FLOWER, A RARITY.

It Comes from the Banks of the Wabash, Is by Charles Major, and Has Already Reached Its Thirteenth Edition..

By Curtis Dunham.

Here it is again—more proof that if you would with the muses you must court them for themselves alone. The clear-eyed and unclouded goddesses are not easily deceived. Because Edgar Allen Poe accomplished that feat when he worked out the shuddering thrills of "The Raven" by the rule of three, and with malice aforethought, is an exception that does not count. Poe was an unreasonably clever person; besides, he did not say to himself, "I will write a poem that will sell thirteen editions in six months, and acquire a bank account." What he did say to himself was this: "I will apply my purely logical intellectual powers to a rhythmic concatenation of horrors that will have all the effect of poetical inspiration." There is a vast difference, and the muses recognized the fact.

The authors of "When Knighthood Was in Flower," the first rippling of whose thirteenth edition have reached the shelves of New York book stores, did not say to himself: "I will discover all the elements which enter into the success of a book. I will combine them all in a novel. I will be witty, I will be wise; I will be engaging, I will be profound; in narrative I will be deft, in action Alexandre Dumas. A single cast of the net, for my name is in the mouths of princes, and terrapin is my daily food." Charles Major, on the banks of the Wabash, far away, was a writer, but he didn't take this unfair advantage of the public when he prepared to write "When Knighthood Was in Flower." He wrote up his book as he wrote in the romance of history. He knew all the loves of all the princesses and maids of honor of all the courts of Christendom by heart. He could read of them in old English annals, and find pleasure in the task, despite the shockingly bad spelling of Tudor times. After a while he grew disgusted with the meager writings of those who were contemporary with these princesses and maids of honor. They did not do their characters justice. So, for his own pleasure, Charles Major conceived himself to be one of those contemporaries. He wrote in the style of the Dance to Henry VIII.—and at odd moments reduced his fancies to manuscript.

The product was the historical novel whose title was suggested by Leigh Hunt's lines in "The Gentle Armourer":

There lived a knight, when Knighthood was in flower.

Who charmed alike the tiltard and the bow's,
The story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The story is, pure art in construction and literary embellishment. In relation to the life of King Henry VIII.'s court what the story of poor Pever is in its relation to the court life in Charles II.'s time. The

GREATEST SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

Marks a New Era in the Science of Curing Diseases of All Kinds.

THE phenomenal cures made by Professor S. A. Weltmer during the past two years have been so astounding and wonderful as to attract the attention of scientists and physicians all over the world. At first this method was treated with doubt and derision, but he has fully demonstrated the supreme capabilities of this science until it is now pronounced by all who have made the investigation, to be THE DESTINED SUCCESSOR OF DRUGS AND MEDICINES for the curing and healing of diseases.

A full review of this marvellous method collected from the most reliable sources indicates that perfection in healing is at last a startling reality.

The Nineteenth Century has been correctly termed the most important in mechanical improvement, scientific advancement and mental development. Marvellous results, achieved through the use of steam, electricity and other forces have followed one another with such rapidity that one scarcely realizes their magnitude or comprehends their value.

In the mighty evolution of human progress, one science alone—that of curing disease—the most important to mankind, has lingered longest in the mists of ignorance, pretension and despair. It is but fitting, therefore, that the close of this marvellous century should be marked by the discovery and control of a power so efficacious in its application and wide reaching in its results, as to completely overshadow all other achievements made in the art of healing during the past. Professor S. A. Weltmer, residing at Nevada, Missouri, has revolutionized the science of healing by the discovery and perfection of a method which seems destined to replace all other means of banishing pain and disease.

The name of Weltmer is to magnetism what that of Edison is to electricity. Neither are the founders of the original theories, but both have lent their mighty intellects to exploiting their respective principles, and as a result have produced distinctive methods by which the currents of Magnetism and Electricity have been intelligently directed, and controlled, in the channels most beneficial to the health and progress of the human race.

"It is not possible in this limited space to fully explain the science of vital magnetic healing as founded, practised and taught by Professor Weltmer, nor to discuss the truth or falsity of other methods. Enough is it to state the facts as they exist, leaving the solution as to the source of this mysterious power to those who have the time, patience and skill for such undertakings. Suffice it to say that no one discovery has so aided the art of healing as Professor Weltmer's method of em-phatizing his system of magnetic healing. There is no room to doubt that it will give the physician a knowledge of the result of the laws and phenomena of the human economy he does not know or comprehend, and will enable him to afford relief and restoration in certain cases where before it was out of his power.

The eminent scientist and psychologist, Professor John Hovey Dods in his great work on psychology, says:

"When the mind is serene, and its mental and moral attributes are so balanced as to act in perfect unison, when all the inner forces of the body are equalized, so as to move in one harmonious and beautiful round in their destined channels; and when the body externally stands in the same well balanced and beautiful relation to the magnetism of the earth, then health must be the natural result of this state of things, on the principle of the common law of equilibrium, in which any or all of these are involved. But when any of these are thrown out of balance, disease ensues. These different forces are but to be overcome, the circulating forces equalized, the mind restored to its wonted serenity, and health and happiness are regained."

This very same theory pervades the whole method employed by Professor Weltmer in his system of vital magnetic healing. It is readily seen, therefore, that the mind of the profound scientist and the healer are reaching the same point although by different means.

A Positive Science.

The science of magnetic healing as discovered and promulgated by Professor Weltmer is a positive science, yet in the infancy of its existence, though the extremely subtle and invisible power of magnetism, which when in contact with the human body is capable of performing all the phenomena of this wonderful science, is coeval with the birth of creation itself. So many astonishing cures have already been effected under its energy by this greatest of all healers, while yet in the very dawn of its being, that one can at present form but a faint conception of that supreme empire over disease which it is ultimately destined to attain, or of that magnificence and power with which coming tasks, suffice it to say that no one discovery has so aided the art of healing as Professor Weltmer's method of em-phatizing his system of magnetic healing. There is no room to doubt that it will give the physician a knowledge of the result of the laws and phenomena of the human economy he does not know or comprehend, and will enable him to afford relief and restoration in certain cases where before it was out of his power.

20,000 Treated.

When it is understood that more than 20,000 persons have been treated, benefited and cured by the Weltmer method of magnetic healing during the past two years, and that the almost marvellous cures performed have caused thousands of patients to write letters expressing their gratitude for the cures effected, the reason for his famous and world-wide reputation becomes no longer a question of doubt.

As a general rule the patients who visit Professor Weltmer for treatment are largely made up from that class known as "incurables," afflicted with chronic diseases of every nature, on whom the practitioners of medicine have exhausted their science and skill, and upon whom the world without hope or relief; the large percentage of cures effected by this method of healing, therefore becomes all the more astounding.

Many names of estimable persons highly respected in science, medicine, literature and art are to be found among those who are convinced of the great power and effectiveness of vital magnetism in the art of healing. Indeed, it may be said that a large majority of intelligent persons of all classes of society generally admit that there is a magnetic force within themselves which only needs an intelligent and comprehensive direction of the will to make it perform wonders.

His friends have long since been alarmed at his own health giving way, laboring as he does, under an intense and immense strain almost day and night. No man without the highest vitality could so long working by any other method than does Professor Weltmer, could stand so long under such an overwhelming task. But he has mastered the laws of magnetic force as it is able to revivify himself quite readily and thus overcome exhaustion.

The Absent Treatment.

Such is the wonderful nature of the Weltmer system of Magnetic Healing that it annihilates space, and hundreds of people throughout the United States, and even in foreign countries, who were not for miles and suffered from various diseases, are now well and happy, having been cured by what is known as the "Absent Treatment." The current of electric force, and in every respect as permanent and satisfactory as those performed by his personal method. However incredulous this may seem, it is the fact that the most wonderful scientific discoveries of this or any other age. And yet it is a method—absolutely original with Professor Weltmer—for the application of the power that is within us."—Chicago Journal.

"The majority of Professor Weltmer's patients are of that class called 'chronics' who have been afflicted with various diseases without relief, and come to him as a last resort, and this fact alone makes his work the more remarkable. If he were not for the fact that these wonderful cures were performed right in this city it would be almost impossible for Professor Weltmer's office has been visited often by representatives of this paper, and his office is crowded from morning till night with people afflicted with all kinds of diseases, and all who have received treatment express themselves as perfectly satisfied. They are cured of their diseases without great relief, and nearly all are cured in less than a week's treatment."—Nevada Mail.

The Science Taught.

It was at the urgent and repeated requests of a large number of persons who desired instruction in the "Weltmer Method" of Magnetic Healing that the American School of Magnetic Healing was organized. Professor S. A. Weltmer was its President and J. H. Kelly Secretary and Treasurer.

After years of tireless energy and investigation, Professor Weltmer has brought to light the fact that every person has latent within him the same powers which have been shown such marked ability proven this by the large number of who have taken this course of instruction, and who are now in the active practice of his method of healing the sick. With the knowledge that he imparts to one they will be amply able to perform this work and perform it correctly. In this healing art it is very necessary that one have the knowledge imparted correctly. The originator of this marvellous method is most certainly the only living man who can and does impart this knowledge correctly, reliably and intelligently.

Doctors Perplexed.

Learned physicians from all parts of the country, the best established and perplexed; they have been unable to understand and much less believe that cures could be effected by such a power, and they had failed to give relief. But the evidence was conclusive; the forlorn and "suffering" patient, as a final hope, had sought a cure from the last straw and found that hope of a promise, that straw the balm of Gilead which gave the long sought relief.

Professor Weltmer courts the most candid and honest investigation of his method and cured by the Weltmer method of magnetic healing. He is a quiet, gentle, unassuming man, whose every act seems to betray his keen desire to help the suffering. He is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

exist on milk and bread, was entirely restored to health in three days by this wonderful Absent Treatment.

Press Comments.

"The principles of the course generally have been noticed and favorably commended upon the wonderful work of Prof. Weltmer, a personal instruction. This course is being selected at random.

"Hundreds and hundreds of people have been cured when the last ray of hope had vanished. The Weltmer method is purely scientific."—Cincinnati Post.

"The 'Weltmer Method' of Magnetic Healing is beyond question the greatest scientific discovery of the nineteenth century. Professor Weltmer most certainly deserves his wonderful success."—St. Louis Chronicle.

"Of all the divine or magnetic healers we have seen or heard, Professor Weltmer is the fairest, frankest and most interesting. He is easily the greatest master of the principles of psychology. The remarkable thing about him is that he claims no supernatural power or divine endowment not given to other men. If you are in trouble or afflicted it may prove a blessing to have seen and known Professor Weltmer."—Butler Free Press.

"It looks as though the reign of medicine, the pills of the contrived, the soon over, the magnetic method as employed by Professor Weltmer of Nevada leaves no shadow of a doubt as to its remarkable curative power."—Sedalia Daily Democrat.

"The success of Professor Weltmer, the magnetic healer, is unprecedented. His remarkable cures, the city and country, equalled in the history of modern times. He has treated successfully more than 4,000 patients in the past six months and has taught his methods of healing to more than 300 people of this and other States."—Nevada Post.

"The days of miracles are not a thing of the past. The fountain of perpetual youth is now within easy reach of all. Professor Weltmer claims no supernatural power, but says all men have latent in them the same powers so wonderfully developed in himself."—Sedalia Daily Democrat.

"It seems that every man in so often in the history of the world some one has been created for the express purpose of restoration, and all who have learned with a view of practicing the science with much success, both financially and in healing diseases, reports indicating that the majority of patients are cured in a day with a $20.00 per day, and at the same time they are bringing health and happiness into many households. The majority of graduates of this course are the result of benefiting their own health or that of their families, and for this end alone the price of the course is nothing compared to the benefits received.

The complete class course of instruction consists of 31 lectures, ten of which are given by Professor Weltmer, and the remaining 41 are given by such able assistants as Professor W. O. Broadbent and Professor S. H. Melton. Two lectures are delivered each day in the week, and three every other day, a total of 17 lectures each week.

The price for the class course is now but $100, which will probably be advanced soon to $200 on account of the large demand for personal instruction. This course is very plain, enabling any one with an ordinary education to grasp the subject in its entirety.

The price of this course, it is understood, is but $25. This course is especially recommended to Physicians and Ministers.

A Noted Author.

Professor Weltmer is regarded by all scientists and psychologists as well as by the greatest living author, as being the recognized authority on magnetism and the greatest living exponent, as well as founder and discoverer, of its most potent principles. Who then more able to write upon such science than this man, who has so trained the delicate sense of feeling that he can almost instantly diagnose a case, and locate the seat of trouble by merely touching the patient?

It is but a short time since that his discovery of sex, created such a decided sensation in the scientific world as to place its author among the noted original thinkers of the age. The sales of his book have been enormous, and well they should be, for in it Professor Weltmer sets forth his discovery of a secretion in the human body, with instructions how to form it, which will not only regenerate the body, but conceivably aid in prolonging life. The book also treats of sexual decline, and prescribes simple yet reliable means to overcome it. It is of inestimable worth, and its sale should be encouraged, as it values life should attempt to get along without it.

Poverty a Disease.

Professor Weltmer holds that poverty is a disease, and one that destroys a man's will power, weakens his nerve, child his ambition, and makes life not worth living. The old adage that it is no disgrace to be poor is a rapid excuse for man's weakness, and nearly every person who is down in the world is weak.

He treats people for success in business, and it is claimed, often succeeds in bringing a man from a condition of poverty to a condition of prosperity and wealth. He knows how to change the vibrations in the mind of one who is discouraged, to strengthen his will, take away his fear and lust, and bring him to that power. The creation for poverty, or rather for success, awakens this power and puts one into another sphere of life, where success, self-reliance, hope, energy and ambition are the result.

A Niles, Mich., man in writing to Prof. Weltmer, says: "I knew all the time my poverty, and weakness, was caused from lack of self-reliance, but could not overcome this depression until I took your treatment for success. I felt that you were pushing me along." While a gentleman at Brunswick, Tenn., a business man, writes: "Your treatment is the best I have ever had. My friends have wondered during the past two months at my activity and energy, and I have to say that my business affairs are fast improving. I hope this condition will always be with me."

"There is in every man," he says, "the latent force and power which, if he but knows how to use, will bring him all that he desires. Everyone is entitled to all the good things of life, and each has the power within him to acquire them. It is only knowledge that is lacking. The creation for poverty, or rather for success, awakens this power and puts one into another sphere of life, where success, self-reliance, hope, energy and ambition are the result."

The entire management and control of this extensive business devolves upon Professor J. H. Kelly, the active secretary and treasurer of the American School of Magnetic Healing. The president, Prof. Weltmer, is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

Professor Weltmer is a man of great power, and his "works" have been done in a quiet and unassuming manner, and his fame, as it always comes to him, is in living today as it was in the past.

majesty, the Queen, awaits her coming at the marble landing."

"No need to repeat the message, Jane," cried Mary. "I have ears and can hear for myself. Then, turning to Brandon, she said: 'If you insist on seeing a person as the King's sister, I beg you to wait. The Queen has just left her presence.'"

He did not turn his face to Mary, but bowed again to the Queen, and then, with a low bow, he left her presence.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary.

"I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary. "I mean to ask your Majesty further to say for me that I have been guilty of any crime," said Mary